Then care must be exercised or many of them will become too fat. Where fowls have range and they are fed by the other system, they should be fed grain at least night and morning. Confined fowls should be fed three times a day, early in the morning, at noon and about 4 or 5 o clock in the afternoon. A system must be used, as it is very important that they be fed regularly. Chicks should be fed oftener than grown fowls. In Lesson No. 12, where recipes for various foods are given will be found a number of suggestions about the best ways of giving the foods to the fowls. Also Lesson No. 13 on Management will contain suggestions for feeding and handling grown fowls. Lessons Nos. 9 and 10. which treat of brooding chicks, contain suggestions about feeding and care of the chicks. HOW MUCH TO FEED. This depends on the breed, season and results for which you are feeding, also the method of feeding you are using. If you are using what is known as the hopper feeding. feed them all they will eat, simply watching that they do not get too fat. The American, Asiatic and English varieties--in other words, the larger lu-eeds--require more feed than the Mediterranean, Dutch and other smaller breeds. No exact amount can be laid down, but the rule the majority of feeders follow is to give them all the grain they will eat up....
